HOW TO REACH "ARNHEMIA"

A Milestone

1952 marks the twenty-first year of this business venture and the seventh of our permanent American establishment at Arnhemia.

These were stormy years and we have seen considerable changes, horticulturally speaking, some not for the better, but, none the less, interest in gardening has increased steadily from year to year.

There has been a tendency on the part of the real gardener to buy locally as much as possible. In line with this trend Arnhemia came into being and, we believe, is serving a worthwhile purpose.

Our associates in The Netherlands are for ever on the lookout for fine novelties and these are tried out at Arnhemia, where you can study them, select your favorites and in general gather new ideas for your own garden.

Visitors are welcome at all times and members of Garden Clubs may arrange for a meeting at Arnhemia.

Daffodils

*I wandered, lonely as a cloud
That floats on high o'er vales and hills
When all at once I saw a crowd —
A host of golden daffodils
Beside the lake, beneath the trees,
Fluttering and dancing in the breeze.*

—WM. WORDSWORTH.

If you weren't discriminating at all, you might well become equally enthused over a meadow full of dandelions.

There's a great difference though and that same difference applies to the many varieties of Daffodils, so that the selection of fine type, excellent form and favorite color is essential.

When your favorite Daffodils rate as high with you as your most cherished books, plays, paintings or music, you will know what we mean.

It is believed that the name Daffodil stems from the French "fleur d'affrodille" which in turn was derived from the Greek "asphodelos." The present terms Narcissi and Daffodils are identical and the many varieties are divided into eleven classes, indicated in our listing, giving characteristics and pictures of the various types.

The Royal Horticultural Society of England, in cooperation with the various Bulb Growers Associations in this country, The Netherlands, Canada, Australia and New Zealand, recently published a new Classified List of Daffodil Names, including information regarding originators and year of introduction. We shall be very glad to send you a copy upon receipt of $1.50, being the price of the book plus handling charges.

You will find that this book will increase your interest in Daffodils and help you enjoy them more intelligently.

At Arnhemia you have the opportunity to browse around to your hearts content and make your choice; no colored prints can equal this live picture and appropriate setting.

*These are the sweet flowers,
Born of sunny showers.*

Daffodils blend in with any kind of landscape, whether woodland, meadow, orchard, along the brook, on the slopes or around the lake.

They will thrive in shady as well as sunny positions, are not too particular as to soil, provided there is proper drainage and in most cases bone meal will sufficiently restore soil requirements, but a complete fertilizer or bulb food, applied after flowering, will insure good bulb growth and large flowers.

Narcissi have a short dormant period and should be planted early, from late September until the end of October. Depending upon the weather, later plantings are feasible but not advisable.

No special working of the soil is necessary, but the holes should be dug in such a manner that the soil around the bulb is loose; when extensive plantings are contemplated a grub axe is the best tool.

*Oh, my brave daffodils, my golden army,
That took the hill so gayly yesterday!*

TUNIS. Broad waved white perianth, large bold, ivory trumpet, flanged brim, flushed coppery at the edge. Giant flower, good forcer. $2.75 for 10, $25.00 per 100.

Daffodils should be planted from 3 to 4 inches deep, that is, that many inches of soil on top of the bulb. Plant six to eight inches apart; no winter covering is necessary.

The natural and informal planting of Daffodils in drifts is by far the most effective and requires little or no care. We favor the odd shaped patches, like little islands, using from 50 to 200 bulbs each, depending upon the extent of the project, one variety per island and sufficient contrast in color to create a pleasing harmony.

If you don't quite grasp the above instructions, or a special problem confronts you, we are here to assist you to the best of our ability. It is of vital importance to us, that the flowering results of our bulbs are pleasing in every way.

In the orchard or meadow the grass must not be cut, until the foliage of the Daffodils is completely dry.

*In my garden goes a fiend,
Dark and wild, whose name is wind.*

—G. SCOTT.

WHITE NILE. Pure white all through; large flower of fine quality. Early $2.50 for 10, $22.50 per 100.

Under normal circumstances these permanent plantings of Daffodils will improve from year to year and must not be disturbed for many years.

We do not offer mixtures, because we believe them to be inferior, but above all, the effect produced by such a mixture does in no way compare to the pleasing picture of a clear color combination of straight varieties.

Not all varieties of Daffodils are suitable for naturalizing and a few which are either very early or very late, can only be used in such a manner, so as not to spoil the composition. These matters had best be taken up with us, when contemplating a natural planting of Daffodils.

Many of the oldest standard varieties were eliminated in these listings, for the simple reason that we have numerous far superior varieties to choose from; nevertheless you will find such old favorites as John Evelyn, Franciscus Drake, Irene Copeland, Fortune, Firetail and Beersheba, all close to 30 years old, still listed.

*Oh, hush my heart, and take thine ease,

We take the sort of pride in our work which perhaps comes with experience and understanding, or perhaps the pleasure we derive from the association with kindred spirits prompts us to strive towards perfection.

Daffodils may be used very effectively in the herbaceous border, where, planted in clumps of from 6 to 12 bulbs, in the foreground, they produce the badly needed color in Spring, in combination with Botanical Tulips, Muscari Heavenly Blue, Scilla Sibirica Spring Beauty and Mertensia Virginica.

Soft colored Hyacinths also make perfect companions, planted amongst Pachysandra or myrtle, in front of an evergreen planting.

Hosta subcordata grandiflora with its fine white flowers in September, makes the ideal groundcover for Daffodils.

Beautiful trees and particularly birches enhance a planting of Daffodils and low growing perennials, flowering at the same time, such as Alyssum Saxatile, Daphne cneorum, Iberis Sem-pervirens, Myosotis alpestris, Iris Pumila, Phlox divaricota, Primula veris and various Trilliums are the perfect attributes for a well balanced composition.

All our Daffodils are grown in The Netherlands, our associates select largest double nose bulbs for us, guaranteed to produce two to three flowers the first year; they need not be acclimated and, of course, are guaranteed to be true to name.

Daffodil bulbs need plenty of air while dormant and in The Netherlands they are stored in lath houses to dry them and keep them dry. Once they are in your possession, either plant them or keep them cool and dry until you are ready for them.

It's so much fun to watch the plants develop and even beginners have wonderful luck.

The pots need not be buried outside; after giving them plenty of water, keep them in a cool dark place until sufficient roots have developed.

The first to bloom are Narcissi Paperwhite Grandiflora which are usually grown in pebbles and flower as early as Thanksgiving.

A heated sunporch is the ideal place for this purpose and there are many other bulbous subjects, to be mentioned later on, which will give you a variety of flowers throughout the winter.

Miniature Narcissi For the Rockgarden

Divisions V, VI, VII & X consist of the charming little varieties for rock work, where their dainty flowers are seen to perfection. Left undisturbed they establish themselves.

Most of these tiny Daffodils were collected in the mountains of Spain and Portugal and on the North Coast of Africa.

The bulbs are very small, some of them almost like a peanut, but they are every bit as hardy as the large varieties.

Although the rockgarden is an ideal spot for these Miniature Daffodils, there are many nooks and corners, at the foot of a tree, or close to the house, where they may be tucked away, to delight you in early Spring, following the Snowdrops and Scilla Sibirica.

*Safe in the earth they lie, serenely waiting;
They never speak to North winds or to snow,
Perfume and color in the dark creating,
Fit for the sunlight world they will know.*

—LOUISE DRISCOLL.

Darwin Tulips

Almost a century ago this sturdiest and most colorful race of all Tulips was introduced, without any data on its origin.

Twenty-five years of careful selecting of self colors, gradually perfected this strain; the originator named them in honor of Charles Darwin, father of the theory of evolution.

Tulips

*Brave little fellows in crimson and yellows,
Coming while breezes of April are cold,
Winter can't freeze you, he flies when he sees you
Thrusting your spears through the redolent mold.*

*Jolly Dutch flowers, rejoicing in showers,
Drink, ere the pageant of Spring passes by!
Hold your carousals for Robin's espousals,
Lifting rich cups for the wine of the sky!*

*Dignified urbans in glossy silk turbans,
Burgherlike blossoms of gardens and squares,
Nodding so solemn by fountain and column,
What is the talk of your weighty affairs?*

*Pollen and honey (for such is your money),—
Gossip and freight of the chaffering bee,—
Prospects of growing,—what colors are showing,—
News of rare tulips from over the sea?*

*Loitering near you, how often I hear you,
Just ere your petals at twilight are furled.
Laugh through the grasses while Evelyn passes,
"There goes the loveliest flower in the world!"*

The name Tulip was derived from the word tulpant, meaning turban, so called from its likeness to a turban.

Originally found in the Southern and Eastern part of Europe, Persia and Asia Minor, by botanists and travelers, the first Tulips, together with herbs from far lands, were distributed by druggists at prices beyond the reach of all but the wealthiest plant fanciers.

In the early 17th century, as Dumas' novel "La Tulipe Noire" indicates, the wild speculations of Tulip fanciers reached such proportions that fabulous sums were paid for one bulb.

Gradually it became apparent that the soil and climate of The Netherlands were particularly suited to the culture of flower bulbs. This eventually developed into a major industry and so Tulips found their way into the gardens of the world.

"Live, oh thou lovely!" Half metal she stayed*

Every garden, no matter how small, can be given a real personality; of course this is largely up to you to work out, but the selection of the proper material is no small task.

Come to Arnhemia, select your favorite colors of Tulips and ask our advice, if you will.

There are so many types of Tulips and just in case you are not familiar with them all, we shall give you a brief outline and a few suggestions as to how to use them.

Most Darwin, Breeder and Cottage Tulips bloom at the same time, about the middle of May, depending upon weather conditions.

They differ in form somewhat, as explained under their respective headings, but just the same are ideal to be used in combination.

And leave the cities void.*

Breeder Tulips

Breeders are the one- or two-toned forms of the old striped Florist Tulips; originally named "Mother" Tulips, the selection and purification, as well as the introduction under the name of Breeder Tulips was the life work of just one Dutch grower. They are easily distinguished from the Darwins by their yellow centers and the typical stardust on the outside of their petals. They bloom at the same time as the Darwin Tulips in May.

The rich and artistic blendings of purple and old gold, bronze and terra cotta, brown and violet, buff and maroon, have made these Breeders immensely popular.

The height given for each variety, was measured in the fields in The Netherlands and may vary under special circumstances, but will non-the-less guide you in placing your varieties.

It is generally conceded that the Darwin, Breeder & Cottage Tulips are the most majestic and noblest types of all.

In form the Cottage Tulips differ from the Darwin and Breeder Tulips, the flowers being more or less egg shaped and as a rule not quite as large, the stems shorter. Never-the-less the Cottage Tulips fit in well and are indispensable, because of the fine yellows and soft pinks.

So if you wish an abundance of color from the middle of May on and harmony of composition, the Darwin, Cottage and Breeder Tulips are your best choice.

*The swollen bulb and burgeoned shoot,
With folded rainbows in their sheaths,
Shoulder away the walls of dirt,
And pierce a shaft of light and winds.*

Although there is hardly a spot in the garden where some type of Tulips could not be planted, we believe, in order to prevent unnecessary failures, or if only just to compare notes, we do well to give a general outline.

It should be understood thoroughly that Tulips will not be happy in damp, low spots and will have a hard time in exposed, wind swept positions. Both conditions can be remedied, one by proper drainage, the other by screening in early Spring.

If nothing else, most gardens, no matter how small, usually have a herbaceous border or foundation planting.

The herbaceous border lends itself, better than any other place, for a collection of Tulips, planted in groups of one dozen bulbs toward the front, in combination with Daffodils.

Amongst the evergreens in a foundation planting, Tulips may be tucked away in nooks in small quantities, depending upon the available space, or the space on either side of the front

*Now the lusty Spring is seen;
Golden yellow, gaudy blue,
Daintily invite the view.*

Cottage Tulips

These were originally found in England on the farms and near the cottages in rural areas, uncultivated, growing wild for years, until all at once they drew the attention of the fanciers.

Their characteristics are very similar to those of the species, in that most varieties have pointed petals, sometimes recurved and many varieties have smaller flowers on shorter stems. Blooming at the same time as the Darwins and Breeders, they can be used very effectively, grouped in front of these taller types.

Yellow was originally one of the predominant colors, but at the present time, due to cross hybridizing with Darwins and Breeders, they come in many pleasing shades and look more or less like them in form and height.

entrance may be planted solidly with Tulips, in which case not too many varieties should be used and the colors should be bright and harmonizing. Pachysandra or myrtle make a good ground cover in this case, otherwise Pansies should be used in combination with the Tulips, to be followed by annuals.

The formal garden requires more planting and material, but in simple design can be very beautiful, even in diminutive form.

It is essential that each bed should be planted with one variety only, that the colors of the various varieties harmonize and that the height is the same, except for the center bed.

Tulips do not mind partial shade, on the contrary this protection tends to draw the stems to greater length and the blooms last longer.

The dogwood boughs are glowing.*

A fine example of this type of planting is a garden path, flanked by French Hybrid Lilacs, setting of a border of Peonies, interplanted with Tulips. In order to attain color harmony, the Tulips should be pink, lilac and mauve shades, similar to the Lilacs, which flower at the same time. The Peonies in various varieties bloom for several weeks, beginning around the end of May.

We should not forget to plant a few Tulips in the cutting or vegetable garden, not alone for flowers for the house, but also to try out a few new varieties.

No matter where Tulips are planted the soil must be dug deeply, at least a foot deep. Every three years a layer of two inches of well rotted cowmanure should be dug in, before planting, deep enough to keep the manure from the Tulips; the following two years a little lime and/or bone-meal, to be applied after planting and raked in.

The depth of planting depends upon the depth of the soil, but from four to six inches from the top of the bulb to the surface works out best. This of course does not apply to the Botanical Tulips, which should only be planted about two inches deep. Tulips planted at greater depth may flower just as well, but we see no point in this practice.

Although there is no question about the fact that, by planting closely, a more brilliant and spectacular effect is attained, we like to suggest planting Tulips from 6 to 8 inches apart, perhaps a little closer in the case of the Single Early Tulips. Never put less than 6 bulbs in one clump.

The only right way to plant Tulips is with a trowel, unless you want to use your hands; see to it that they are all planted at the same depth, if you want them to bloom at an even height and above all, set the bulbs firmly in the soil.

*The gay gaudy tulip observe as you walk,
How flaunting the gloss of its vest!
How proud! and how stately it stands on its stalk,
In beauty's diversity dressed!*

Lily Flowering Tulips

This distinct race of Tulips was the result of crossing the yellow Cottage Tulip Retroflexa, with its pointed and reflexed petals, with various varieties of Darwin Tulips.

Although properly classified as Cottage Tulips, we list them separately because their daintiness and elegance makes them particularly suitable for the small flower garden, or where the bolder types would be out of proportion.

In formal gardens planting may be done by removing the topsoil to the proper depth and placing the tulips at the right distance, replacing the soil. Under these circumstances it is also convenient to renew the topsoil every three years, forking the sub-soil and working in a layer of well rotted cowmanure.

Wherever the Tulips are planted, proper cultivation of the soil up to flowering time is absolutely necessary and feeding with a good bulbfood will intensify the color of the flowers and make for longer stems.

When your Tulips arrive, keep them in a dry, dark and cool place, to prevent root action, which would be injurious to the flowering results. Top growth does not matter. Open all bags and do not stand them on a damp floor.

In the East late planting is advisable, from the last week in October to the end of November, depending upon the weather. Do not plant right after a rain.

Generally speaking, Tulips may be planted successfully as long as the ground is open.

Experience has taught us that in general bulbs need no protection against winter weather and that often more harm is done by covering.

*What then I say is this,
that we ignoramuses
who know very little about it can derive a pure pleasure, not merely from the contemplations of gardens,
but from the reading of books about them.*

Triumph Tulips have proven to be most suited to our climate, because of a sturdy, almost coarse texture, which prevents burning and they offer the added advantage of flowering about ten days earlier and still hold their own alongside the Darwin Breeder and Cottage Tulips.

Flower and stem are in perfect balance, of vigorous growth and the colors are quite unique, because of unusual brilliance and warmth.

The Peony flowered Tulips were originally called Double Triumph Tulips or Double Late Tulips.

They have the same sturdy growth of the Triumph Tulips and their colors are equally spectacular. Their similarity to Peonies is so striking that varieties like Eros and Mount Tacoma really don't look like Tulips.

Like the Lily flowering and the Parrot Tulips, these Peony flowered Tulips need to be planted by themselves and they will never fail to draw acclaim.

*Without a sound, with no footfall,
Breathes a garden behind the wall.*

The Broken Tulips, also called "rectified" Tulips received mention as far back as 1600 and apparently were quite popular, considering the many colored prints by Dr. Thornton of that era.

Very much forgotten and grown on a small scale only, we made a special effort to bring them back and a display at "Arnhemia", as well as an exhibit at one of the prominent local Spring Shows, met with great enthusiasm.

The Broken Tulips are divided in three classes, namely:

REMBRANDT TULIPS. These are the broken Darwin Tulips; red, rose, lilac and purple shades, with flames or stripes of a related hue.

BIZZARES TULIPS. These broken Breeder Tulips are beautifully striped and feathered brown, maroon or black on a yellow ground.

BYBLOEMEN TULIPS. Broken Breeder Tulips, beautifully feathered and flamed, either rose or violet on a white ground.

A precious source of scent and color, displaying an abundance of jubilant tones of rose, red, blue, yellow and orange, Hyacinths may be used to good advantage in our present day gardens.

Blooming as early as they do, about the middle of April, they are quite effective planted informally along the edge of beds and borders or amongst Daffodils.

A Simple Squill

*I saw a Squill at break of day
Under the budding trees;
A squill so mystical and gay,
So full of certainties.
No one, I think, could view it long
Except upon his knees.
Yet this was but a simple Squill
Under the April trees.*

(After W. A. Percy)

The tiny Snowdrops, braving snow and cold weather, never fail to warm your heart in anticipation of Spring.

These and a host of Scillas, Muscari, not to forget the Miniature Daffodils and Crocus, should grace everybody's garden; they are lovely in themselves, wherever they are planted in groups of 25 or more, under trees, along the woodland path, close to the house in the shrubbery border.

They are most effectively shown off when planted amongst groundcovers; Ajuga repens or myrtle, for instance, can harbor the tiniest, whereas Muscari and Scilla Campanulata are well at home amongst Pachysandra terminalis.

Lily of the Valley

(CONVALLARIA MAJALIS)

This shade loving plant with its glossy foliage and clusters of fragrant, pure white little bells, needs no introduction.

They are best planted in beds, shady position, northern exposure and clumps should be used for immediate effect.

We offer the Giant type, producing much larger flowers. Strong field grown clumps. $9.00 for 10.

Mertensia Virginica

(VIRGINIA BLUE BELLS)

As an early Spring flower, requiring hardly any care, Mertensia is most useful, regardless of the type of planting. The plant grows from one to two feet high bears a panicle of flowers about one inch long in short pendent clusters of a porcelain-blue and soft pink combination.

In the border, the rockgarden, or for naturalizing in the woods it makes a lovely companion for the Daffodils, being in bloom at the same time, continuing into the month of May.

The roots should be planted immediately upon delivery, about two to three inches deep and without further care they will establish themselves and increase.

Largest roots $2.65 for 10, $24.00 per 100.

Most of these little fellows establish themselves very easily and multiply by way of offsets or seed themselves from year to year.

A safe way to determine the depth of planting is to take three times their diameter.

Scilla Campanulata is perhaps the showiest of all; the graceful flower spikes are at least 6 inches tall and the bells are loosely set. They bloom in May and the flowers are long lasting.

The Bulbous Irises are suitable for cutting as well as border planting; they are quite hardy and bloom in June.

Eremurus or Foxtail Lilies produce tall and sturdy stalks, crowned by flower spikes of two to three feet long, composed of closely set bell-shaped flowers of a pure white, a delicate pink or a soft yellow. The peculiarly shaped roots should be planted not over 5 inches deep, resting on a layer of sand to secure drainage. A light mulch will be sufficient winter cover. Fine for border planting and a most spectacular cutflower of long lasting qualities.

*They who make gardens grow, are in duty
Sunwise and moonwise and starwise to beauty.*

Lilies

*Beauty is silent,—through the summer day
Sleeps in her gold,—O wonderous sunlit gold,
Frosting the lilies, virginal array!
Green full-leaved walls the fragrant sculpture hold,
Warm, orient blooms—how motionless are they—
Speechless—the eternal loveliness untold!*

—GEORGE E. WOODBERRY.

In order to give most types of Lilies the proper chance to establish themselves, so that they feel at home, and flower for us many years in succession, it is advisable to give them the protection of the shrubbery border or woodland.

Incorporate peat moss to lighten heavy soils and fertilize with bone meal only. Never use manure and be very careful with chemical fertilizers.

Plant at the prescribed depth and make certain of good drainage; envelop the bulbs in sharp sand.

The right time to plant Lilies, like any other bulb, is, after they are dormant in the Fall. They are delivered to you at that time, beginning with Lilium Candidum in August and ending with Lilium Speciosum in November. Lilies cannot be dug until they are dormant and even if delivered as late as December, they will give a good account of themselves.

There the several varieties of Lilies which may be kept in cold storage over winter, for Spring planting, if this proves more convenient.

The best time to plant these Iris is in September, October or in Spring.

Herbaceous Peonies can be grown in most any location, even in light shade and a good garden soil of loomy texture, sufficiently drained, will do.

Bonemeal or any available garden fertilizer may be used and woodashes, about a handful to a plant, will prove beneficial.

The roots should be planted so that the buds are about two inches below the surface; too deep planting often prevents the plant from blooming.

The best time to plant Herbaceous Peonies is in the Fall, September and October.

Our selection represents outstanding varieties only, early, mid-season and late flowering; our roots have from 5 to 8 eyes or buds and flower the first year.

Tree Peonies, shrubs in character, are the first to bloom in the early Spring, followed by the Herbaceous Peonies.

The flowers are larger than those of the Herbaceous Peonies and have a crepe-paper-like texture, ruffled and crimped on the edges of the petals.

A well established, mature bush is a truly breathtaking sight when in full bloom, growing three to four feet in height and spread and bearing 25 to 100 blooms.

Plant in early Fall, avoid exposure to the North or West winds and protect the plants the first winter.

Our shrubs are 4 to 5 years old and have bloomed.

The average American garden in general and the perennial border in particular, can hardly do without Phlox which takes over, after the Spring flowers are gone.

They are old fashioned favorites and with the many new varieties which are a great improvement in size of blooms as well as color, they are even more popular now.

Prepare the soil deeply, provide proper drainage and fertilize; if possible plants should be watered in dry weather.

You may plant in October, November or in the Spring, ten inches apart.

The hardy evergreen Kurume Azaleas are easily grown and reasonably hardy; although sun loving the ideal location in the North East is partial shade, fairly protected; they should have sufficient moisture at all times. Planted in groups along a woodland path or a brook, they make quite a show especially with Rhododendrons, Kalmias and Andromedas for a background.

A fair garden soil, whether stiff or sandy, can easily be made suitable for these Azaleas, as long as there is no lime present, by incorporating peat-moss, leafmold or muck and adding to this from year to year. Superphosphate, sulphate of potash and ammonium sulphate may be applied after the Azaleas are through flowering.

Hardy Evergreen Kurume Azaleas

FLAME. Beautiful fiery red; a popular variety, excellent for contrast.

HINODIGIRL. A very fine, brilliant scarlet; never fails to produce an abundance of large flowers.

SHERWOOD. Good size flowers of a soft orchid color; fast grower and shapely.

SNOW. Large pure white flowers borne in clusters; beautiful glossy green foliage.

SWEET BRIAR. An old variety of sterling qualities; flowers bright pink and showy; a truly shapely plant.

Bushy, vigorous, young plants with a spread of from 8 to 10 inches $3.50, 10 to 12 inches $5.00.

Azaleas are easily transplanted any time of the year, preferably in September or Spring. Dig holes large enough, so that a goodly amount of leafmold can be put around the ball, giving the fine roots a chance to start to work at once. Pack the soil around the roots and apply water liberally. Use a mulch of leaves or pine needles and do not cultivate, since the roots of Azaleas come close to the surface. Water thoroughly before winter sets in and cover with evergreen boughs.

Hybrid French Lilacs are most popular shrubs, the mention of which brings memories of childhood to practically everyone. They bloom at the same time as the May flowering Tulips and their soft toned, large flowers, as well as their fragrance, complete the culmination of Spring. Lilacs require sun and an alkaline soil; use plenty of lime and bonemeal. They should be pruned immediately after flowering, if necessary and it is well to remove the old flowers. It takes Lilacs 2 years to become established after transplanting and the first season the flowers are not as large, nor are they true to shade.
